Legal and Regulatory Challenges

Most policy changes in the blueprint rely on executive agency rule-making. These can be countered via Administrative Procedure Act (APA) Litigation (challenging arbitrary and capricious rules) and seeking Court Injunctions to stay implementation.

Legislative 'Power of the Purse'

Congress holds the authority to control federal funding. Strategies include Appropriations Riders to forbid funding for specific programs and Codification of civil service rules into federal law to prevent executive overreach.

Executive Rescission

Future or sitting administrations can issue new Executive Orders to immediately rescind or replace previous ones, alongside updating internal agency directives for the DOJ, FBI, and EPA.

Protecting the Civil Service

Addressing the proposed 'Schedule F' reclassification involves utilizing the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB) and passing legislation to restrict the conversion of non-partisan roles into political appointments.
